FALL OF THE YEAR ON SKYLINE DRIVE

Skyland, Virginia.- Of all the seasons of the year, Fall along the Skyland Drive in Virginia's Shenandoah National Park is the most beautiful. From now until November, the blending colors of turning leaves throughout the forested "mountain wonderland of the East" will offer hundreds of thousands of visitors panoramas they will never forget.

The wooded slopes of the famed Blue Ridge Mountains reach the height of their beauty in mid-October. Vast acres of reds, yellows and browns extend as far as the eye can see. The peaks of color vary throughout the Park, depending on the altitude and the climate.

Forests cover about 85 per cent of Shenandoah National Park.

Through the years of development since the Park was dedicated in 1936, many foot trails have been blazed through the area, leading from the Skyline Drive down into the very heart of the cool woodlands. In the Park, two types of forests, called "wet" and "dry" because of soil conditions, have their distinctive species of trees. In the canyons and on the cool northern slopes will be seen hemlock, hardwood, red maple, yellow birch and white ash. Along the ridges, red and white oak, pine, hickory and black birch predominate.

Along the eastern slopes and in the southern areas of the Park are the "dry" forests, where chestnut-oak and scarlet oak, white pine and black gum, Blue Ridge fir, red spruce and grey birth are predominant.

The Skyline Drive, which extends 105 miles along the very tops of the mountains in the Park, features 65 specially constructed overlooks, where motorists can drive to the very edge of the mountains safely for sweeping views of Fall beauty. Also along the Drive are modern, comfortable tourist and vacation accomodations and wayside, with lunch counters, gift and souvenir shops and automobile service stations.

LETTER TO THE EDITOR

Editor Times-Virginian,
Dear Sir,

Please give me a little space in your paper. I want to try to say a few words to the public. Dear friends and co-workers. We are glad and thankful to the good Lord to see the tenth month in the year 1954. So many that started with us are gone, but the Lord knows best. So we all who are here have so much to be thankful for. Let us all think on it and strive to live better each day and each hour and to make this home a better one to live in while down here on this side of life and be ye also ready when our call comes. We are glad to have with us a visitor, Mrs. Pearl James, who has been visiting in the home of Mr. and Mrs. W. D. Ferguson and the home of her uncle, Henry Phelps, who left on the 7th for Lynchburg where she will spend a few days with her friends and leave for her home in Philadelphia, Pa. May the Lord take care of her that she may get home safely. We will not forget to ask for our friend Mr. R. L. Burke. May the Lord bless him. Now, may the Lord take care of us one and all and save us at last. Your friend,

Henry Phelps.

SUCCESSFUL START TO SPECIAL BOW HUNT AT HOG ISLAND

About 100 eager archers were ready at dawn October 4 for the start of the special deer hunt with bow and arrow on Hog Island Waterfowl Refuge. Many had scouted the area several days before and most had set up camp among the pines by late Sunday afternoon.

The hunters, successful applicants for the necessary permits, showed the increasing number and skill of Virginia bowmen. First kill, a spike buck, was reported by John [illegible] of Princess Anne county afterward, a party from [illegible] bagged a yearling doe and [illegible] berg, of Warwick, downed a 5-point buck, also a yearling. Colonel Ingold, from Wa[illegible] successfully stalked and [illegible] young buck. By sundown [illegible] had been reported killed.

The reason for the special deer season on Hog Island is to reduce a surplus of the deer population which has been damaging the waterfowl food supply at the refuge.

TEACHERS FIND NEWSPAPERS BIG HELP IN CLASSROOM

Someday students may "hit the newspapers" the way they now "hit the books."

After using the newspaper as a "tool of learning" in classrooms of 130 schools, the superintendent of schools in Sauk County, Wisconsin urged other educators to try the same thing.

Why? Because arithmetic became more meaningful, place geography more interesting, reading, writing and spelling improved," according to Supt. Kurt Schoenoff.

"The need for vocabulary study was enhanced, children became more aware of the need for highway safety and school newspapers sprang up."

Copies of the daily newspaper were supplied to each school by the Milwaukee Journal, which sponsored a book, "The Newspaper in the Classroom."

Once in the schools, the newspaper was used right along with textbooks. Its purpose was to relate book subjects to everyday events, to "tie in" classroom instruction with current happenings.

Students developed an appreciation of art by writing action words to describe newspaper photographs. Places in geography books took on new meaning—and were easier to learn—when they were discovered in news stories. Map-making got to be fun.

By preserving headlines of the most important news, students kept a running summary of current events. Other scrapbooks were kept to supplement civics texts. The filing and selection of articles taught youngsters to evaluate and organize.

In vocabulary and word drills, newspapers opened up whole new vistas. Descriptive words and phrases from news stories came alive. New words were discovered, and new ways for using old ones.

In science, where late developments are important, accounts of new discoveries and findings made learning more enjoyable. Daily weather reports led naturally to studies of barometers, thermometers etc.

State and local history was vitalized through the newspaper columns, with their many accounts of past events.

"How to do it" ideas were useful in vocational classes. Citizenship training relied on news stories to build interest. Editorials on highway safety promoted children to make their own studies of the highway situation.

In these and many other ways, the Wisconsin schools found newspapers a valuable source of intructional material. As pointed out by George E. Watson, Wisconsin's superitendent of public instruction:

"I would rather have them know about the fundamental issues of today than the details of how Caesar built his bridge."

NEWS FOR VETERANS

GI home builders now are required to give veteran - purchasers a one-year warrantly that their homes have been contructed in "substantial conformity" with Veterans Administration - approved plans and specifications.

VA said the one-year warranty was being put into effect October 1, under the Housing Act of 1954, which stipulates that all new housing purchased with the aid of VA or Federal Housing Administration guaranteed or insured loans must carry the warranty.

The warranty does not apply to existing homes which have been occupied for more than a year.

It applies only on new homes for which VA issues a certificate of reasonable value on or after October 1, 1954.

Builders or sellers of new housing will give each veteran-purchaser a warranty in a form which has been prescribed by VA. A copy of the warranty, on which the veteran has acknowledged receipt, must be forwarded to VA by the lender before VA will guarantee or insure the loan.

Notice of any substantial nonconformance with plans and specifications must be given by the owner of the house to the warrantor within one year from the date the veteran takes title or the house is initially occupied, whichever is earlier. The terms of the warranty will run to successors or transferees in event the property chanzes hands before the expiration of the warranty.

The warranty terms prescribed by VA and FHA are identical. For homes sold with GI financing where FHA has made compliance inspections, the warranty form proscribed by FHA will be used.

VA emphasized that the one-year warranty required by the Housing Act is in addition to any other rights or privileges a purchaser or owner may have under any other law or instrument.

VA said it will be up to the purchaser to enforce his rights under the warranty.

Appomattox is a growing town.

FREEZER PACKING

The way food is wrapped or packaged for freezing makes a great difference in how successful it is as a frozen product and how well it holds its quality. For those who are prepared cooked food for freezing the U. S. Department of Agriculture offers the following suggestions:

Cool the food rapidly and as soon as cool put it into containers of moisture-vapor-proof or moisture-vapar-resistant material. Pack food tightly into container to reduce the amount of air in the package.

In quart containers the food may be separated into two or three layers by a double thickness of waxed, resistant material such as cellophane. This makes it possible to separate the frozen block of food easily to shorten the heating time.

Choose a container of a size that holds only enough for one meal for the family. Quart containers hold 2 to 6 servings. Use only containers with wide-mouth openings so the food does not have to be thawed completely to remove it from the container.

Many cooked foods are semi-liquid and thus are best packaged in rigid containers made of moisture-vapor proof materials such as aluminum glass, pottery, plastic, plain or enameled tin, or moisture-vapor resistant material such as heavily waxed cardboard. Some prepared foods, like meat pies, may be frozen in the containers in which they were baked, ready for reheating at the time of using.

AHS Newscast

By Jane Holt

October 14, 1954

Dear June,

We have been in school five weeks now, which means it won't be too much longer before reports will be out for the first time. I wonder what that will bring forth. Have you been studying hard?

This week Mr. J. A. Burke, our Superintendent, and Ed Giles, a former student, went to Kansas City, Mo., to attend the Future Farmers Convention. Isn't it nice that our local people are honored by being given this trip?

In school Tuesday the Junior and Senior 4-H Clubs had their first meeting for the year. On Tuesday we commenced with our regular club program. This program will work as it did last year only the clubs will meet on different days. I sure hope that many of the students will participate in the clubs. They add so much to our school life. I guess your activities are really keeping you busy—huh? What about your sorority?

The Safety Patrol is well underway now. They have organized and we have patrolmen at the crosswalks at school and U. S. Route 460. Mr. Kerr is urging all the students to please follow the rules and obey the patrolmen.

Tuesday we had our first fire drill of the school year. It always comes as a shock to us students when the bell starts ringing. However, we realize that this practice is what we need to be prepared in case of emergency.

Friday night our varsity chalked up another victory for A. H. S. Deetsie Rothgeb made a touchdown with Teddy Mitchell booting the extra point, making the score Appomattox 7 and Gretna 6. Jerry George and Thomas O'Brien showed up good on the line, with Jack Wayne Burks backing up the line. Man, our support was really terrific at the game. We had one entire section of the bleechers for cheering alone. With this kind of support the cheerleaders could do their best.

Mary Anna McDearmon added a great deal to this with her drum. Good school spirit was also shown at the pep rally Friday afternoon. This Friday night we journey to Halifax for a big game. We hope to see many spectators there supporting our team.

Last week the Spanish Club elected their officers for this year:

Pres., Edna Gregory
V.-pres., Lucy Perdue
Sec. and Treas., Betty Mitchell
Reporter, Mary Watt Stanley.

The second year students are looking forward to initiating the first year students. This is always a big event for the Spanish students. I guess you remember the initiation.

You recall last summer when Edna Gregory and Betty Jean Goad attended Girl's State at VPI, don't you? These two girls spoke to the Legion Auxiliary about their trip Monday night. This was one experience Edna and Betty Jean will always remember as a real enjoyable one.

Homecoming preparations are getting started now. We've got to elect our Homecoming King and Queen, plan floats and do lots of work. I'll tell you more about that next week.

I certainly was glad to see one of our former students, Tom Moore, who is now serving in the Armed Forces, at the football game Friday night. He is doing real well out there in Kentucky where he is stationed.

This concludes the happenings around 'ole A. H. S. this week. Be looking for more news from me next week.

'Til then,
Jane.

Extended dry weather has severely damaged hay crop and pastures in this area.

V. P. I. to play University of Richmond in Richmond this Saturday night.

A. H. S. to play at Halifax Friday night.
